TO OUR FRIENDS:

Last week we had a great discussion in class about “where are the dead.” It is a difficult subject because the answer lies in the spiritual realm. We can know a little from the Bible but cannot understand it all yet.

A more relevant question to me now is “where are the living?” As I look out over the congregation on Sunday morning, I can see through the front doors as well. Cars drive by while we are inside worshipping. People walk down the sidewalk. But why aren't they here with us? We have heard many different excuses from them but it is still puzzling. Is there no realization that they are not really “alive?” The only life that is important is a life serving God. They seem to be oblivious to that truth.

As sad as it may be I can only come to this conclusion about where many of the living are: “They are dead.” It isn't too late for them though. We know what to do.
