TO OUR FRIENDS:

What Saul of Tarsus (Paul) Saw on the Road to Damascus

On his way to Damascus to deal out persecution to Christians and stamp out the religion of Christ, Saul saw himself as he really was, Christ as He really is, and himself as the man Christ wanted him to be and was able to make of him.

We have great difficulty seeing ourselves as others see us, but we should try to do so. It is even more important that we see ourselves as the Lord sees us.

Saul saw himself as a man with an impressive education in Laws and traditions of the Jews, very religious and righteous according to his understanding of the Law. He saw himself as a defender of the faith of God, and was dedicated to destroying the work and influence of that "impostor" Jesus called the Christ.

After Jesus appeared to him, he saw that he was ignorant of the truth, a sinner needing to be saved, lost and unworthy of the Lord's salvation. He saw Jesus as the God's Messiah and his own proper Lord. He saw the necessity of leaving the religion of his fathers. He saw his true mission as preaching the gospel of Christ and promoting the faith he had once tried to destroy. He saw himself as debtor to Christ and to all men because he was now saved, forgiven, and assured of God's crown of life because he became the man Christ wanted him to be.
